Content Model

Overview

The Content Model application allows you to designate a particular functional area of the vehicle for your investigation. You are able to select a specific area of the vehicle and, using the other VDS tools, perform analysis and testing on that area.

The left hand part of the screen displays each of the functional areas of the vehicle, and the right hand part of the screen displays more detailed information about the item currently selected. The information in the left hand part has a hierarchical structure with three levels. Each level enables you to select a more specific area of the vehicle. For example, at the top level you may select the Brake System for analysis, at the second level you may select Anti-lock Braking, and at the third level you may specify Wheel Speed Sensors. The navigation of the Content Model application works in very much the same way as with JTS.

The screenshot displays the Jaguar Land Rover IDS SDD software interface. The top bar shows the software version [SDD-DVD130_V7.03] and the selected system S-Type 00 / 307-01 Automatic transmission/transaxle. The left sidebar contains a hierarchical tree of vehicle systems, with 307-01 Automatic transmission/transaxle selected. The main content area, titled 'Content Model', provides an overview of the selected system, explaining that it allows users to designate a functional area for investigation and perform analysis and testing. It also describes the hierarchical structure of the Content Model application, which allows users to select a more specific area of the vehicle for analysis. The interface includes a 'Usage the Content Model' link and 'Other references' such as 'Glossary of INFS terms' and 'Usage the Interactive Training Module'.
